Toxic Ingredients Found in Most Bottles of Typical Sunscreen

Studies found that the main chemical used in sun lotions to filter out ultraviolet light may be toxic and the chemical's toxicity doubled when exposed to sunlight.

Octyl Methoxycinnamate (OMC), which is present in 90 percent of sunscreen brands, was found to kill mouse cells even at low doses in a study by Norwegian scientists. When researchers shone a lamp for two hours to simulate midday sunshine, even more cells died. A study in the April 2004 Journal of Chromatography found that there is significant penetration of all sunscreen agents they studied into the skin. So it is fair to assume that when you use sunscreen, your body is absorbing synthetic chemicals.

If you follow the recommendations on the sunscreen's label to apply generous amount of the product every few hours, it's likely you will be absorbing your fair share of potentially toxic chemicals. It takes a stretch of the imagination to believe that all of these chemicals will not have effect on your system.

Physical vs. Chemical Barrier Agents

It is also important to make the distinction between the two kinds of sunscreen agents: Chemical and Physical. Chemical sunscreen agents protect you from the sun by absorbing the ultraviolet (UV) and visible sun rays, while physical sunscreen agents reflect, absorb, scatter and or block these rays.

Titanium Dioxide, which you will find in our ZUNSHADE SPF 30 Sunblock, acts as physical barrier agents that reflects, absorbs, scatters and blocks UV Rays, and is considered to be least problematic in terms of absorption, plus, you have the full benefit of our premium grade Virgin Coconut Oil, Apis Cerana Beeswax and our exclusive natural and organic Herbal Formula.

Helpful Tips for Sunburn Relief

Despite some of our best efforts, sunburn happens. Overexposure to the sun could result in a mild first degree burn, which consists of redness and pain for few hours after the sun exposure that eventually worsens after the next 24 hours. Here's what you can do if you, or your child suffers for sunburn:

- If you've been in a sea water or in a chlorinated swimming pool, rinse the water off thoroughly, do not rub or use a cloth. Pat yourself dry.
- Take a cool (not cold) bath. We highly recommend Heaven's Cure VCO Soap Pure Unscented or VCO Soap Patchouli as your bath soap.
- Apply Heaven's Cure Coco rub Lemon or Coco rub Regular directly to the burnt area.
- For mild sunburn, apply Heaven's Cure "Not Just for Body Oil" in affected areas. You have the choice of 3 variants: Lavender, Peppermint or Baby Fresh.

The best remedy for sunburn is and has always been prevention. And if you think you might be in the sun longer than is good for you, be safe, not sorry – bring Heaven's Cure ZUNSHADE SPF 30 along!
